Amani Khalil Shah; Owner of Nowhere Generation

Overview

Overview

"But I know now that going from place to place is just something exiles have to do. Whatever the reason, the earth is never steady beneath our feet."
— Susan Abulhawa

Owner of Nowhere Generation and a known face in activist circles, Amani Shah was actually featured a few years ago as one of Baltimore Business Journal's "30 Under 30". She's a talented artist, a successful businesswoman, and a force of nature in whatever community outreach program she finds herself sponsoring. Amani is a testament to what hardwork and dedication can do for even a refugee from the Middle-East.

(She's known to Anarchs in the city as one of the humans Julien looks after in whatever ways he can. Why? Only Julien would really know).

Face Claim
A.I.
Amani is a pretty woman with dark eyes and olive skin. Her hair is long, straight and black, though in public it is always in a hijab. They vary in color and style. Her makeup is subtle, understated, but always complimentary.

She tends to dress in long sleeved shirts and jeans, keeping herself covered whether she's at work or out enjoying life. She always wears a lanyard with a brass key hanging around her neck. It's not to any house in Baltimore, but she wears it all the same.
