History

History

Belladonna was the only child of Edwin and Meredith Farrowgrove. They were part of a group of fanatical witch-hunters obsessed with hunting witches and other creatures. They taught their daughter witch hunting at a very young age. Her lessons comprised lore of the occult and how to handle weapons. She was not as strong as most of the hunters in her group so she relied on her knowledge and cunning. She believed that they were getting rid of monsters and that this was making the world a safer place.

Everything changed when they decided to track a vampire. Her family was split off from the others who were hunting the vampire, they were moving silently in the daytime to try and catch the vampire unaware. This was proved to be futile, they were in its domain. She saw her parents killed in front of her with such swiftness and brutality, that she did not even have time to react. She does not remember what happened after but she woke up under the control of the very vampire they tried to kill.

She now performed acts in accordance with her clan. Her sire served as her mentor watching her every step of the way. She tried to find a sense of normalcy but normal food made her vomit and years under her sire's control have left her easy to control and manipulate. She was used to hunt members of her group and to safeguard against any of their actions. This caught the eye of a powerful witch hunter who believes her to be a massive threat.

She now serves her master in both politics and in hunting anyone he deems his enemy. Her desire to serve is strong as ever but now as a walking irony, her beliefs are not her own, they have been toyed with and twisted as she fights to stay resolute.
