"The real truth isn't what matters in court. It's the truth that they'll best understand that you want to tell."

At first glance Draven is just a great lawyer that works for his own major firm. He seems nice enough and charming. But truthfully, Draven is the most unpredictable person that probably has walked the face of the earth. He could be happy and smiling one moment and then ripping your heart out with a spoon the next. He doesn’t like being told what to do and he thinks that family is the only thing on the planet worth a shit. No life is beneath him snuffing out, that’s of course unless it is that of a child or pregnant woman. Monsters don’t have to be monsters all the time. He will give anyone a run for their money intellectually speaking, and physically speaking, well there’s a reason he’s not been caught doing his other work. The man is a walking and breathing weapon. He gets his job done for both the clan and his clients.

History

History

Draven was born a kind person. But many people early on in life took advantage of that. So, he himself had to become cruel and unforgiving to the rest of the world in return. That way if anyone ever got the idea of messing with his family, they would think twice when they saw the type of person he was and what he was capable of doing to those that stood against him. He's arrogant, at one point saying, "I believe I'm powerful, therefore I am." He exudes confidence and emanates a quiet menace. There's a quiet assurance about him, a confidence in himself and the space he occupies. He looks like trouble and gives off the same aura of primal danger as a wild animal. He is a predator through and through. Draven has an iron grip of self-control around himself, but his inner monster is never far. He's not very good at showing a wide range of emotions and is skilled at masking his true emotions. He is determined, intelligent, sly, and cunning. can be a perfectionist, and his attention to detail is astounding. His personal motto is acta non verba, or "actions, not words," and he lives by this principle. He is aloof at times, but he can also be charming and flirtatious when he wishes to be. He approaches everything strategically, even seduction. He values his secrets, and all of these qualities are what make him a perfect lawyer and an even better hitman.
