Marcelle Clement

Overview

Overview

March is a seemingly ordinary grant student at John Hopkins University of Psychology that takes her studies seriously suddenly has been acting strange as of late. Arriving home in a strange matter of the night and sudden change of perspectives for the Sophomore College student have many begging the question of whom she really is.

Mars having been more active after finding out her father has recently been released from prison and escaping a life of foster homes landing herself within the field of psychology. Not to mention getting caught up in things leading a strange new life within the dark.

At first glance March seems to be a small town girl who made it big while studying for the SAT to get into her dream school, Johns Hopkins. While being a member Alpha Phi, she has never fully adopted their idea of sisterhood and has often been spotted with a stack of books revolving heavily within her study.

March always seems to dress in some combination of attire approved by the sorority she is a part of consisting of some comfy clothing usually paired with a set of jeans with a canvas book-bag

While presenting as her alter-ego Mars, she comes off almost lackadaisical to local gangs and thugs. More often she is wearing her hair down with a pair of glasses with a low-cut tank top and pullover.

History

History

Early Life

Marcelle was born in Pickens, West Virginia to a seemingly lovely Priest and his wife Annabell. She started early school life attending an all girls Catholic School and was a prestigious student up until middle school where as her father had started getting involved into some of the Appalachian Lore with a buddy of his. After being missing for some time did Marcelle and a few of her friends venture out with the search party into Holly River State park where the corpse of her father's friend had been discovered assumed to be that her father had killed him and fled the county. Marcelle and her mother where left to fend for themselves with her father missing and wanted had her friends slowly alienated her and her church fearing her family casting them aside leaving Marcelle to suffer a lonely life as a preteen.

Teen Life

Marcelle after having her father missing and presumed dead by Picken's Chief of police and the West Virginia State Rangers was left to mourn an empty casket with her mother mourning over the sudden loss of her father. After the recession finished had Marcelle went to take a breath of fresh air noticing a group of young boys hanging out on the opposing side of the graveyard. Being unsure but wanting an excuse she went over to confront them and bonded quickly with them often skipping school to spend time with them much to her mother, Annabell's dismay. After getting into a fight with her mother had she ran away with the small gang and her boyfriend "Batter" and finding their way slowly migrating out of Pickens and eventually into Baltimore.

Marching Madness

Marcelle had started to become known as another person entirely alienating herself from her former name and her faith stealing from the rich within Baltimore with the Crossbones. She had started finding herself enjoying her new life and breaking the rules and living life on the edge. One day catching her lucky break stealing a laptop from John Mors and finding incriminating evidence that she debated sending to the police after seeing all what was on there. Yet her partner had started to act up around her, started being aggressive suddenly over their recent findings. Marcelle didn't think much of it until she witnessed him doing something that she couldn't even imagine and fled in terror. That was when March broke up with him and had been living on the streets. Rather than tell the police had she dared to threaten him with the evidence found and had landed herself within John Hopkins Psychology program with a grant. Having stopped meddling with gangs and decided she wanted a better way out of the life her partner and hopefully leading to a life where she can solve the closed case of her father.

Flickering Light

Marcelle had tried to put her past behind her and focus on her studies and had proved herself to be a hardworking student that excelled within her academic career being within the running of valedictorian of her class only to find herself receiving strange phone calls within June only to have stepped outside for a smoke break when she heard shuffling only to feel someone go to wrangle. Fighting back with all her might was she no match feeling herself go into some sort of haze only to wake blindfolded amongst many other people moving in some form of transport to be dragged out followed by screams. Marcelle tried to scramble free but only found herself caught among the mess feeling a strange sensation before blacking out.

Marcelle woke to find herself covered in dirt and scrambling against everything the sound of the footsteps above drove her mad with an intense hunger she never felt before had she crawled her way out latching at the persons feet and attempting to bite them only to feel a bat hit the back of her head. Feeling a cold air on her once again did she wake in some strange room unsure as to what had happened. Having been educated and assessed as to what she had become to her disbelief had she continued to ask about her ex thinking he did this to her wishing to have some vengeance for the loss of her friends and the loss of her former life.
