

Overview

Overview

Otaku, trashy, online freak. These culminate who Phoebe is. She doesn't even know who her sire's name is. Typical among the Clanless, but she could not care less about that. The next big controversy is being posted all over social media, and she is on the case. That's where she feels most alive. Passionate, and righteous anger with the injustice of the world.

But in secret, this is nothing more than a fallacy. A cover up to her deep seated problem: she cannot find a real purpose other than finding the next hot button issues, or the next hot anime character or Vtuber to pine after.

After the Embrace, this life of rapid consumerism and solidarity has a new twist to it. Now that Phoebe has a real cause to fight for, The world will see if her activism was in earnest or is cowardice.

AVPD (Avoidant Personality Disorder) - She is the epitome of the idiom, 'Can't take what you dish out'. While a big critic about her tastes, she CANNOT handle criticism very well at all, and the internet has made that worse. She goes into full denial, moving goal posts and just gets very agitated when she doesn't have an argument.

History

History

Phoebe at a very early age was introduced to the internet. She was a gamer girl from the early 2010s, and lived in it. Familiarizing herself into the inherent toxic culture CoD lobbies and blog forums had to offer in those halcyon days. Though you may not think of it now about her in the modern nights, Phoebe was once an internet troll, taking delight in bullshitting people and make them look stupid. This was especially prevalent when she was a teenager, bumbling around 4chan giving people headaches with her online antics. She draws art, starting off on Deviantart, posting her character crushes, OTP (One True Pair) ships, and the occasional BL comic she works on for fun. The website she frequents the most (and still does in some degree but not as much anymore) is Tumblr. That is her internet Haven, and no one can take that away from her.

When she became an adult, she moved her operations onto Twitter where her work was recognized and appreciated. As the 2010s political scene ramped up in its need for shock and identity politics, Phoebe was first among them to hop on the bandwagon espousing her need for solidarity. A huge advocate for the Me Too movement, she got herself involved with the Left.

In 2024, the scene was no less tumultuous, the 2020s had become the worst it has been. Phoebe, scared about the future of her own existence. So she started taking chances, like online dating, she so wanted to at least get herself a boyfriend or girlfriend, it didn't matter. She wanted comfort. Despising Tinder for its predatory and destructive algorithms and what it does to both men and women, she chose to use a forum based dating site. Unwittingly, she would meet her death at the hands of her date. Or so it seemed. She met her supposed date, a cute guy named LazyVoyager944 (She never got to even ask his name) and was immediately enraptured by his calm, rational takes and safe demeanor. So in love with him, she had no issues with wanting to fuck on the first date since she liked him that much. (It would be revealed later that she was under the effects of Presence when she received the Embrace.)

She died that night on the 10th of April, and became something else. No longer the days of her walking under the sun, the curse of Caine in her blood. She awoke the night after with a powerful thirst, head throbbing, her date no where to be seen. She texted one of her online friends for a ride back home. Worried sick for her safety, Alicia picked her up. This would be her first feed. Alicia still thinks that Phoebe was just overjoyed to be 'rescued'.

The activist Trash struggles to come to terms with her inhumanity, not even aware of her true nature all the way, but knowing that something was /deeply/ wrong and she can only feed on blood. She coops herself up in her room, taking as much art commissions she can and finishing them. With a seemingly boundless energy, her job at the current moment is a digital artist, so that she does not have to go outside in the day and goes out at night when she has to. She is so scared that someone will discover her dark secret...
